THE CYCLONE IN INDIA.

Five Thousand Lives Lost - Dreadful Neces. Later accounts from the country districts in India which were desolated by the eyelone in October show that the loss of life was very large, five thousand persons having probably perished.

A Calcuits paper says —

«Kvery day brings intelligence of frush misfortunes. In one district abone (Diamond Harbor), and the sountry between it and Calcuita, it has been computed that not less than five thoimand souls have been drowned by the land thodmand souls have been drowned by the land thodmand souls have been drowned by the land thodmand for the storm waves. Great exercions are made by the Calcusta community to organize a system of relief for the survivors of this droadful visitation. A stramer had been chartered to convey medicines, blankets, rice, and water to the Diamond Harbor districts. A Calcutta paper says :-

The following statement of the destruction to

"The Lieuremant-Governor of Bengal was to leave Darjecting on the 16th, for Calcutta, when it was hoped that no time would be lost in organizing a strong establishment, placed under culcular supervision, for the removal of the carcasses of men and cattle, which are scattered all over the positions of the southern part of Calcutta wished by the gale; and for the removal also of the lead contaminating the air on the banks of

"Of the 32 inland steamers and flats at Cal-ectia, 19 are complete wrocks, and the remaining 13 seriously injured. Of the 30 tag steamers, 10 are completely destroyed, 2 very seriously injured, and the remaining 18 are at work as before. Such a destruction of shipping property, we believe, has never before been equalled."

The Caunrd Captains. The Boston Advertiser gives the following remembered of the Captains of the Cumard

All the Captains, with perhaps one or two exceptions, who commanded the first vessels of the line, have passed away. The service is a trying one, for the exposure is great and the responsibility weighty. Donglass, Hewity, Miller, McKellar, and Ryrie left the company years ago, and most of them are dead. Harrison, who commanded successively the Hobersia, the Cambera, the America, and the Africa, and with so much skill, united his fortunes with the Great Eastern, and, after crossing the Atlantic perhaps hundreds of times, was, as will be remembered, drowned in Southampton Water, his boat being capsized in a gate of wind. Leitch, to the regret of all who have sailed with him, will probably never make another passage. Shannon still continues—a man of markel shilly; and what was said of another of the Captains is steamers.:and what was said of another of the Captains is peculiarly applicable to him: "He never seems to go to bed, and he never gets out of temper." Lot sailed from New York last December on his Loit sailed from New York last December on his three hundredth passage across the Atlantic, and his friends gave him an entertainment on the occasion. For many years in the Calcilonia, afterwards in the Europa and Asia, he now commands the Persia; he is courteous and unpretending, yet firm and prompt— a lamb-like ion," as one of his lady passengers well described him, every inch a sailor and master of his profession. Judkins, "the old Commodors," as he likes to be called, who came out in one of the first steamers as chief officer, and who now commands the Scotia, deserves special mention. Hie has commanded in succession almost every new ship in the line. Since he was mention. He has commanded in succession almost every new ship in the line. Since he was promoted to be Captain, he has seen the foreign steam-to-mage of Liverpool increase from half a dozen vessels to three-quarters of a million of fores, and the time required for an Atlantic steam voyage reduced nearly one-half. It is said that he knows the shortest and straightest course between Liverpool and New York. He maintains the atrictest discipline in his vessel, and as a call from him as the binnacle or in the engine-rooms may be received at any hour of the day or night, his subordinates are always on the sharp lookout. He is abropt in his manner, and sometimes overhis subordinates are always on the sharp not contiHe is abrupt in his manner, and sometimes overbearing with his passengers. As a man he is by

The London Telegraph says that the paper left by the morderer Muller has been opened and read by the sheriffs of London, but it contained no confession. Its object was to account for the employment of Muller's time on the night of the murder, and the circumstances under which he became possessed of the watch and chrin and har, so as to appear consistent with his innocence, but it did not contain any statement suggesting the guilt of any party. As a confession was after-wards made by the prisoner, the sheriffs scaled up the paper on Monday morning, considering that its publication would not answer any useful purpose, but in a matter of so much importance they wished to avail themselves of the advice of their brother magistrates. The Lord Mayor said that in reference to this subject an applica-tion had been made to him by Dr. Cappel, the German elergyman who had been in attendance upon the prisoner down to the time of his exe-cution, asking that are desquents left, by Muller cution, asking that any documents left by Muller might he handed over to him. After some dis-cussion the Lord Mayor's motion was agreed to.

Beecher on the Apple. itenry Ward Beecher made an address the other day in a New York Fruit Convention, on the apple. He said it was the greatest of Amerithe apple. He said it was the greatest of American fruits, being the hardest, most widely distributed, and the most useful. The tree often reaches the great age of two hundred years. The fruit is always a luxury. Even a pear may not vie with it in lusciousness, and it has one peculiarity, which not even the peach can share; it never cloys. Mr Beecher ran over the various methods of preparing it for the table, and indulged in a most glowing apostrophe to the apple pie and its blessed inventor. The use of citler, he thought, was gradually creeping back from the oblivion to which the progress of temperance and consigned it, and, although, as a temperance and he could not recommend its use, "If you sake it," said he, "I beg of you to make it would not recommend the continued in the could not recommend the use, "If you sake it," said he, "I beg of you to make it

The alarm of English rallway travelers continues. The islest incident is that of a man on the Groat Eastern Rallway, who was traveling in a third-cuss carriage, and who proceeded with the greatest coolness to unitess himself. He was the fellow-travelers, and its whom were several bis fellow-travelers, and its whom were several women and children. Residential of General Justice Whith.—
The Chicago Tribenic agnounces that General Julius White, a few months and commondant of the Draft Rendezvous in this city, and afterwards commander of a division of negro troops in the Army of the Camberland, has resigned on account of ill health contracted in front of Petersburg General White entered the service as Coloned, commanding the 57th Illinois Fremont Ritles, during the summer of 1851, and in June following was promoted to a brigadirerable.

Throughout the later period of his military career, General White has resisted the reasons which now enforces his tender of his second resignation, his tirst not having been accepted, his health proposed for the state increases. his first not having been accepted, his heat'h seriously impaired by the fatigues and exposures of a soldier's life.

How They Did is Other Times.—The good tolks of New Haven appointed in city meeting. September 23, 1784, a committee of seven, "to assist such strangers as came to this city for the purpose of setting therein, in procuring houses and land on the most reasonable terms, and to prevent such persons, as far as possible, from being imposed upon in the way of ront, and the value of houses and lands, and to give them such information and intelligence with respect to business, markets, and commerce, mode of living, customs, and manners, as such strangers markets and to cultivate an easy acquaintance of such strangers with the citizens thereof, that their residence therein may be rendered as eligible and agreeable as possible."

Caper Grey.—General Scott, in his antolography, gives the following account of the origin of the coth known as "cadet grey," and worn by the cadets at West Point:—When Scott was such approaching the bridge, General Rial, the British commander, who had dispersed twice his numbers the winter before, in his expedition on the American side, said:—'It is nothing but a body of Buffillo militia." But when the bridge was passed in fine style, under his heavy fire of artillery, he added wish an oath, "Why, these are regulars!" The grey costs at first deceived him, which Scott was obliged to accept, there being no battle of Chippewa, our military cadets have worn grey costs ever since.

SHAMEPUL OUTBAGE ON GENERAL STONEMAN. Shammert. Outnage on Genthal Stoneman, who was re-cently released from a Rebei prison, was assaulted by the Copperhead proprietors of an eating salous at Wellsville, on the Ohio river, a few days ago. The General with his family had stepped into the saloon to get some tea, taking with him a colored nurse to feed his child, as they had had the saloon to get some tea, taking with him a colored nurse to feed his child, as they had had nothing after leaving Alacoma. While taking their meal, a woman stepped up and informed the General that they did not permit "niggers" to eat at the same table with white folks. He replied that only his own family occupied the table. Soon after, and before the General had finished his meal, one of the proprietors came along and demanded his fare. General Stoneman referred to the insult he had just received from the woman. The man then struck him on the side of the face, and a brother of the proprietor coming in, struck him again and dragged him from his chair by his hair, and the two continued kicking and beating him in a most brutal manner. He was finally released, but not until he had been severely bruised and lac-rated. Mrs. Stoneman, who attempted to interfere in her husband's behalf, was rudely thrust aside by his assailants. Such is the spirit which Copperheads assailants. Such is the spirit which Copperheads manifest towards the brave men who have suf-fered in defense of their country.
